Dear Melissa:

I want to take this opportunity to formally thank you for developing the WebQuests Module as part of a new online professional development course for West Virginia teachers – Wired for Learning.

Thanks to your work, along with that of other CIEC 715 students, the course was successfully offered for the first time this summer and it will be offered again during spring 2015. I'm sure you appreciate knowing, as do I, that your work is truly benefitting teachers and students in our state.

This letter may be used as documentation of your efforts, if needed, within your doctoral portfolio. A screen capture of your section of the course may also be a viable artifact.

Again, let me express my sincere thanks for your participation in this course development project.

Sincerely,

Lisa A. Heaton
